FIRST ANNUAL CONFERENCE

SYDNEY INTERNATIONAL CONVENTION CENTRE (THE ICC), 5 APRIL 2022

MINISTER'S WELCOME

Welcome to the inaugural Australian Disability Service Conference & Awards. It is an honour to join so many trailblazing organisations and providers at this wonderful event.

The National Disability Insurance Scheme (NDIS) is a world first insurance scheme that is profoundly transforming the lives of many Australians with significant and permanent disability, their families and their support workers. The scheme has grown from around 30,000 participants during the trial period, to now supporting more than 500,000 Australians in their day-to-day lives, and helping them achieve their aspirations. The provider market is critical to achieving this, with more than 17,000 registered NDIS providers now delivering the essential services.

Our investment in the NDIS continues to grow. In the December budget update, the Morrison Government invested an additional $26.4 billion over four years into the NDIS. This brings total funding for the NDIS to $142 billion dollars over four years.

After eight years of the NDIS, the Scheme is starting to mature following early investment in building independence and inclusion. As we look to the future, my focus will be on working with the sector and participants to co-design improved NDIA systems and processes, deliver more consistent decision-making and ensure participants have the right funding in place. The NDIS will continue to grow and evolve, but it is a scheme that all Australians can be proud of, and I look forward to working with you to make the NDIS even more successful.

Senator the Hon. Linda Reynolds CSC,
Minister for the National Disability Insurance
Scheme, Minister for Government Services

DIRECTORS' WELCOME

On behalf of One Community we warmly welcome you to the inaugural 2021 Australian Disability Service Conference (ADSC) at the magnificent Sydney International Convention Centre.

Typically, we spend our days travelling Australia running local disability networking events. It is here we are fortunate in meeting exceptional people making a difference in their local communities.

ADSC is unique in that it is a conference for the disability workforce delivered by the disability workforce. We encourage you to approach the conference with an open mind, think creatively, share your thoughts and most importantly get excited as current and future directions are explored. And don't forget to check out the fantastic range of exhibitors throughout the day.

We are fortunate that we work in an industry that can truly make a difference to people's lives and their wider community. Don't lose sight of the big picture and know that you can make an impact. Sometimes even the smallest contribution can have a monumental impact.

Thank you to our conference presenters for sharing their wisdom and expertise, and most importantly for provoking thought and creativity within our industry.

Finally, thank you to Tender Loving Cuisine (TLC) for sponsoring the inaugural Australian Disability Service Conference. We would like to personally thank Jack and Maureen from TLC for their unwavering faith in One Community.

We found out that a lot of information was retained in people's heads rather than putting it down on paper. It has freed me up so I can get out there and do what I actually enjoy doing rather than being stuck in the office trying to work out how to teach everyone to sort out the process.
